Ten Northfields In United States

Origin Provides Subject for "Research"
(From Northfield News, Northfield, Minnesota.)

Northfield, Minnesota, may be the home of "Cows' Colleges and Contentment," with the largest per capita representation in "Who's Who in America" of any city in this country, and it may boast world-wide renown as the home of the St. Olaf Lutheran choir, the seat of Carleton and St. Olaf colleges, the Holstein Center of America, and the Waterloo of the Jesse James and Younger Brothers gang of bank robbers,—but a letter mailed anywhere in the United States to an address in Northfield, without the name of the state attached, has only one chance in ten of reaching its proper destination!

Why? Because there are ten Northfields in the United States. At least there are ten whose status is dignified by Uncle Sam to the extent of designating them as the sites of post-offices of the United States.

There are four Northfields in New England alone; one in New Jersey; four in the middle west and north-west; and one in Texas. They range in age from 256 years dating back to the seventeenth century, to a youth of twenty-two years old spent in the twentieth century. The largest is Northfield, Minnesota, with a population of 4,153; the smallest is Northfield, Maine, with 85 inhabitants. They were founded for a variety of reasons by differing groups of settlers, and the name "Northfield" applied to the settlements for one reason or another.

Origin Of The Name
A bit of controversy has arisen among local historians from time to time as to the origin of the name Northfield as applied to the little settlement established here in Minnesota in the upper valley of the Cannon river in 1855. It is now pretty well established, however, that the name of the founder, John W. North, at least suggested the first syllable of the name of the future city and that the decision of the early settlers, many of whom were New Englanders, was easily reached because he name brought back memories of the far-off Northfields of Maine, Massachusetts, Vermont and Connecticut. Thus the ideal of placing in this fertile wilderness of the future North State a "bit of transplanted New England" by means of the little settlement being built here in territorial days, was early reflected in the very name, borrowed from the homeland even if suggested by the logical desire to perpetuate the memory of the man to whom, more than to any other, the town owes its establishment.

Indeed, in searching further for the origin of the name it is necessary to turn to old New England herself to find its roots. The data was readily supplied by the postmaster of Northfield, Franklin county, Massachusetts, who was only too glad to aid the Northfield News in making this little excursion into the field of "genealogical research" as applied to the town.

Northfield Farms Residents Consider Posting Lands

The opening move to regulate hunting about Northfield Farms was made last Friday evening when about twenty five men including property owners and sportsmen met in Union Hall for a discussion of the question. Owners of hunting lands at both the upper and lower farms and the mountain were present, as well as several members of the Sportsmen's Club of Millers Falls and game wardens, Ruberg and Hughes.

The formation of an association to create a game preserve by the banding together of adjacent landowners and posting their land was taken up. It was thought by some that such an association could be formed and fees asked for the privilege of hunting over such posted land.

Game Warden Ruberg pointed out that one flaw in such a program would be in the proper stocking and policing necessary to insure good hunting and the keeping out of trespassers. Mr. Ruberg stated that with the posting of this land the state would cease to supply either fish or game to help restock the brooks and covers, or aid in keeping out trespassers. After some farther discussion it was finally decided to call another meeting in the near future of the property owners alen to decide on their course of action.

Herbert Parker, former attorney-general of the state, and she is a sister of George Parker, former registrar of motor vehicles. Besides holding important public positions, Miss Parker manages a 200-acre ancestral farm.

The regular faculty meeting of the Northfield Seminary was held Wednesday afternoon and the special speaker was Professor Ralph Harlow of Smith College. His topic was "American Educational Institutions as I Saw Them last year in the Near East." Professor Harlow spent his sabbatical year visiting the Near East, where for several years he was a missionary. In his address he enlarged upon the effect of their influence in the social, political, and religious life of that area. The speaker was invited to come under the auspices of the Bible department of the Seminary.

EDITORIAL

The citizens of Northfield will certainly commend most heartily the position of President Hoover in his position on reduction and economy in government expenditures. His stand on naval reduction is timely and wise. The absurdity of the whole matter is that the United States is spending for its naval budget for 1930-31 about three hundred and seventy five million dollars or a hundred million more than England. The cost of these navies for 1930 to the United States per person was about three dollars and twenty-five cents while to the citizens of England it was over six dollars per person. It would be far better to curtail on these expenditures and use the money for educational purposes, or bettering the condition of living of our own people. The Navy League however takes issue with these ideas but surely the people will not stand for their militaristic notions.

All over the country, states, cities and towns are organizing unemployment relief committees and charitable and relief organizations are getting together for centralized and definite work. No small town need be exempted from this endeavor. Here in Northfield we have not witnessed much of the suffering and sorrow which has been the lot of industrial places but in a way we have had our own problems during the depression which we all hope is ending for better conditions seems not far ahead. However the thought is born that charity or relief in Northfield should be better controlled and organized and should be ready to act immediately, quickly and without duplication in its effort to assist the worthy poor and needy in our midst. Surely the town is doing all it can within the provisions of the law and the limit of its finances for our deserving and our selectmen deserve much credit for the splendid handling of the welfare department—the various churches and their societies are doing much and individuals do not lack in responding when appeals come to their attention—but to the Editor who has observed much of this charitable work in our midst for many years there seems to be a need of a permanent centralized committee to co-ordinate and respond intelligently and effectively as well as to secure the means for its treasury. "The poor we shall always have with us" and what more pleasure and purpose might we have as citizens than to contribute in our various ways—public or private—through contributions or proceeds of entertainments to a fund for a permanent Charitable Society. Recent cases in which the Editor was interested saw charity duplicated needlessly while children, needing help, and without friends, roamed our streets barefooted—only recently. Yes we have a problem—there are humans to be cared for intelligently. How shall we provide the way?

When Mr. Louis J. Taber Master of the National Grange delivered his address at the National Grange meeting at Madison, Wisconsin on Wednesday—Armistice Day he ended his discourse with words so hopeful that the Editor reprints them here:

"Every tidal wave recedes. Every storm ceases to blow. Every depression will eventually end. Without mitigating our present distress, it is well to part the curtains of time and see what the future holds for America. Ours is a land of over one hundred and twenty millions of people, with the highest standards of living in the world. These millions must live and be clothed and fed. Ours is the oldest constitutional republic in history. It is fundamentally sound. Our natural resources are unimpaired. The wealth of mine, of forest, of field, and of factory are still secure. The American mind and genius for organizational leadership has yet untouched the heights of its possibilities. Doubt, dislocation, and confusion will pass away. Organization and equality will be secured for Agriculture. A stabler monetary structure will be provided. The evils of distribution will be corrected. Step by step, through patience, and with constructive leadership, the causes contributing to this collapse will be removed. And after all, it is well to remember that depressions are like sorrow—they deepen and purify the currents of our national life. If this crisis brings the farmer into his organization and the people of America back into the House of God, it will not have been in vain.

For thousands of years untutored man dreaded darkness. He feared wild animals and he feared wild men. In that early day, watchmen were kept on guard during the night, and with joy they announced the heralds of day. Today in our nation there is darkness and confusion. There is lack of faith and stability in the world. Anxious hearts and waiting souls, struggling with hunger and cold, anxiety and distress, ask:

"Watchman, what of depression's night?" and the answer comes back: "Lo, the dawn appeareth; a fuller day is at hand!"

OBITUARY

JULIA M. OBER

The sad intelligence reached Northfield this week of the sudden death of Mrs. Julia M. Ober, wife of Mr. C. K. Ober of White Plains, N. Y. who has had a summer residence here at Ober's Lookout on the Gulf Road for many years and both of whom are well known in Northfield and have many friends. Mrs. Ober left Northfield this fall and upon her return home became ill necessitating an operation following which peritonitis set in and she passed away on Sunday November 8th. The interment was on Wednesday, November 11th at Beverly, Mass., the early home of both Mr. and Mrs. Ober. Northfield and Hermon friends who knew and loved her—and appreciated her sterling character will miss a friend in the coming days.

MRS. MARTHA J. HAYDEN

The funeral of Martha Jeanette Hayden, whose death occurred last week Thursday in the home of her son and daughter, Edward E. and Mabelle S. Hayden in Gill where she had been cared for during an illness extending over six years, was held Saturday afternoon last and was largely attended. Rev. O. J. Billings, pastor of the Congregational church, of which she was a member, officiated, and the body was taken afterwards to Warwick, her native town, for burial. Mrs. Hayden was a capable nurse and for many years nursed in homes in Orange and vicinity. For 16 years she made her home with Mrs. Jennie Conant of Orange.

MRS. EMMA FOSTER PERRY

News has been received here of the death of Mrs. Emma Foster Perry in Boston. Mrs. Perry was widow of Arthur Perry, long a member of the board of trustees of the Northfield schools. Mrs. Perry was much interested in religious work and was president of the Ramabai association and a member of the executive committee of the Talitha Cumi Home and Hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Perry presented Perry Pond to the seminary here. She left three children, Arthur and Henry and Mrs. Francis Hall.

Navy Recruits At Greenfield

The United States Navy has transferred to Greenfield the recruiting service it has maintained in Holyoke for the past several years. W. H. Miller, Signalman first class, U. S. N., in charge of the recruiting station. Mr. Miller has had eleven years of service in the Navy. The new Greenfield office will serve this entire district. Mr. Miller's office is located in the Post Office building on East Main street where those who are interested in the Navy can find him between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. It is rumored that some Northfield young men are to pay the office a visit to talk things over.

Saw Big Black Bear

As Chief of Police and Mrs. Henry Rogers of Orange were motoring along the highway between Orange and Winchester last week they saw a large black bear in the road not far from the Winchester, N. H.—Warwick line. The animal was on the side of the road and loomed up like a mountain as the Rogers car passed. It was the belief of the chief that the bear would weigh at least 300 pounds. Others in that vicinity have seen the bear at a distance and apparently it roamed into that vicinity during the past few weeks. Thus far it has done no damage and the opinion prevails that it is not particularly ferocious or even a trouble maker.

Items Of Interest

Pessimism is giving way and faith and confidence are being restored, according to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. The New York Board of Trade believes that the "critical period is passed and that business is on the road of recovery."

Married teachers must step aside in many of our public schools and the latest city to make such a declaration is Detroit, Mich. "We know married women are good teachers, but in a business depression such as we are experiencing, we believe it is an injustice for a husband and wife to draw salaries from the city at the same time," Inspector Frank A. Gorham said.

"Boston has dropped some of her highfalutin' notice," writes a visitor from California. "I remember that when I was here a score of years ago, a shop opposite where I boarded had the sign out: 'Professor of Crinological Abolition and Cranio-logical Trips.' Today the same place run by the same man bears the lowbrow sign: 'Barber Shop.'—Boston Transcript.

The S. S. Exclusive left New York last Thursday and included in its cargo were fifty pedigreed cows, bulls, goats, turkeys and hens were dispatched by the Near East Foundations as a good will offering to improve the breeds in Albania, Turkey and Greece.

Among the donors were Edward W. Larabee of Peterboro, N. H.; E. B. Parmenter of Franklin, Mass.; Dr. G. S. Means of Brookfield, Mass.; W. Marshall Crane of Dalton, Mass.; W. Grant Fancher of Lawrence, Mass.; John M. Luckert of East Moriches, N. Y., and F. W. Risbee of Gray, Me.

The Poet's Corner

With every rising of the sun
Think of your life as just begun,
The Past has canceled and buried deep

All yesterdays—There let them sleep,
Concern yourself with but Today,
Grasp it, and teach to obey
Your will and plan. Since time began
Today has been the friend of man.
You and Today! A soul sublime,
And the great heritage of time.

AT THE FAIR

He was a blind musician,
Who played at county fairs,
"School-Days" and "Annie Laurie"
And such like homely airs.

"When We Were Young" he rendered
And Will You Love Me Then?"
Starting the tears of women—
Touching the hearts of men.

Nothing of modern music—
Jazzes that thrill and pall;
But quaint old-fashioned pieces
With heart-throbs in them all!

He had served as a soldier
Before his sight grew dim;
And she, in a gentler fashion
Served for the love of him!

She was a bird-like creature,
Sweetheart, sister or wife,
Who shared in his joys and sorrows
And guided his steps of life.

Dully the rabble listened,
Meagerly, too, it gave;
But the tunes were clear and tender
And the smile she smiled was brave!

Something there was between them
That others might not share;
Love and a blind musician!
Romance was pictured there.

Into her little basket
A slender coin I dropped;
And then the crowd engulfed them,
And there the story stopped.

THE LOST GARDEN

I know of a scented garden
The garden that men call "Youth",
Where the rose of innocence blossoms
And the snow-white lily of truth!

But never my soul retraces
The path to that garden gay
Behold! in the vanished places
My feet forget the way!

I know of a spot where linger,
Untouched by stain or strife
Or Death's effacing finger
The morning thoughts of life.

And there are found the faces
That smiled—but could not stay;
But ever the vanished places
Thwart me and bar my way!

The odors there are tender,
Nor ever tempests swell,
And clothed with shining splendor
The sinless spirits dwell.

And a changeless glory graces
The dead dreams there that stay;
But lo! in the vanished places
My feet forget the way!

And whether by doubts surrounded
Or whether in faith I go,
I feel myself confounded
By a power I do not know!

ARTHUR GOODENOUGH
West Brattleboro, Vt.

I long for a home on a quiet street
In a little country town,
Where the trees grow tall and the branches meet,
And the sunlight filters down.

I long for the friendly voice at the door
Of my neighbor across the way,
The wave of her hand on my way to the store,
And the laugh of a child at play.

I long for the breath of the open fields
The stretch of a country lane,
I long for the fruits the rich earth
yields,
And the waving, ripening grain.

I fling a word o'er the garden wall,
The nod of a friend at the gate,
The time o' the day and the pleasant
call,
And the welcome which lies in wait.

A life in a wholesome country town
May in richness far surpass,
The city's glitter and gold renown
Which may turn to sordid grass.

Oh, had I the touch of the magic pen
The wand which would open the eyes,
I would show the glory of fields and fen
So we would love and not despise.

Northfield High School News Notes

Beryl James is absent from school on account of ill health. It is feared that she will not be able to return for several weeks.

Progress is being made by the members of the cast of the Senior play, to be given November 24. The money will be used to defray the expenses of the Washington trip.

The mechanical man, on exhibit at the Westinghouse Electrical store in Greenfield, was visited by some of the students from the High School. They reported that he was a fine fellow.

Gene Giebel is in the Brattleboro Memorial Hospital following an operation for an abscess on her spine. We are all sorry to hear that she may not be able to return to school for about a month.

Prizes were awarded last week to those who secured two or more subscriptions in the recent campaign sponsored by the Curtis Publishing Company. Elsie Tenney awarded the prizes. Mary Dalton had the largest number of subscriptions, with Grace Randall a close second.

Several members of our teaching force attended the Franklin County Parent-Teachers' Association which met at Mt. Hermon last Saturday. Among those present were: Miss Elizabeth Braley, Miss Mary Dalton, Miss Julia Alexander, Miss Ethelyn Sheldon and Miss Margaret Mathews.

Twenty Killed By Autos During Week

Twenty persons were killed by motor vehicles in Massachusetts the week ending November 9th. This is three less than in the week before, but three more than in the same period last year.

Registrar Morgan T. Ryan calls attention to the fact that the death list was swollen by eight fatalities over Halloween. Over-speeding and inattention continue to be the principal causes of fatalities.

Of the number of killed 11 were pedestrians, seven occupants of motor vehicles, one a grade crossing victim and another a motorcycle rider. There were five child victims, last week as compared to three in the same period a year ago.

Irresponsible Hunters Spoiling Chances For Others

The following action is what occurs to the detriment of fair minded and considerate hunters when outlaw methods are shown by irresponsible gunners. A young fellow walked into the dooryard of a farmer who lives within the confines of a nearby town last week and shot two pheasants which had been associating with a flock of hens all summer and to which the farmer had become attached. As a consequence the irate property owner posted all of his 300 acres of land. A resident of Orange looked out of his window last week Thursday and saw a fellow kill a pet gray squirrel in the driveway leading to his garage and henceforth there will be no more hunting on his property either near or removed from his residence which is within an eight of a mile of Central square.

Guest (trying to be complimentary): "It's a long time since I've eaten such a good meal."

Hostess: That's what I thought.

They say it is dangerous to take a partner. What about this New York banker who has nineteen?

"Does your wife often grieve because she threw over a wealthy man in order to marry you?" "She started to once, but I cured her in short order." "I wish you'd tell me how." "I started in grieving with her. And I grieved harder and longer than she did."

An urn has taken place in New England according to a Boston Transcript account of the business meeting of New England shippers.

"Business corporations are in a sounder financial condition than they were during any prior period of depression," said Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange; and this is one of the features of prohibition America during a world wide depression. Certainly the presence of the saloons which were outlawed by the 18th amendment would not have had anything but a depressing effect upon the situation. The lack of wide spread drunkenness in America during the world wide depression has been one of the outstanding features of this era.

The Wrestlers Last Monday

Cowboy Hughes, of Northampton, made his first appearance on Northfield mat Monday night in a drawn contest with Chic Ray of Holyoke. Hughes was substituted for Bill O'Connell in the advertised main bout, because of an injury to O'Connell's back, obtained in a recent match, would prevent him giving his usual excellent performance.

The first fall went to Ray in 25 minutes, 25 seconds when he pinned the Cowboy with a double arm lock. The second fall was awarded to Hughes after eight minutes of violent encounter. It was won by a crotch lift and body slam. Hughes protested the award, stating that it was his understanding that a winner had to hold his man for a count of three, and that both shoulders must be on the mat for this length of time. He said that he did not feel that he had won fairly. Bu chic stated that he was satisfied.

The twenty seven minutes remaining expired before either contestant could secure another fall. The semi-final was a handicap match between Tommy Dyer of Pittsfield, and Ed Morton of Whately. Dyer attempting to throw Morton twice in thirty minutes. Dyer won one fall in 17 minutes 25 seconds, with a flying mare. But failed to secure the second fall.

There were four preliminary bouts. Joe Snow against Speedy Green of Riverside. Snow won by a headlock in 8 minutes 30 seconds.

Ray Kervian defeated Osmond Haven in 50 seconds with a double headlock. The crowd demanding more, he took another fall in 7 minutes 40 seconds with a half Nelson and body hold.

Clare Pineo, of Whately, defeated Harold Cadette, of Greenfield, in 1 minute 25 seconds by a headlock and body hold. And Cadette, matching himself against Joe Stewart went down for the count in 20 seconds.

The Boston and Maine railroad announces that in the month of October its train service was 100 per cent on time. It had operated 14,187 passenger trains.

Millions of boys and those who were once boys, regretted the death in Elizabeth, N. J., on Friday of Everett T. Tomlinson, 72, weaver of tales about American historical characters. He was known as the author of "Young People's History of the American Revolution," "Boys' Biography of Gen. Pershing," and countless stories dealing with the heroes of the New World, from colonial days down to date. His boys' books were believed to have attained a circulation of more than 2,000,000. Dr. Tomlinson was a Baptist leader, educator and organizer. He was graduated from Williams college in 1879.

Turkeys will be less plentiful for the Thanksgiving menu this year, but will be in greater supply for Christmas. Figures supplied by the government bureau of agricultural economics showed that the 1931 turkey crop was slightly larger than in 1930, but that a smaller percentage would be ready for market by Thanksgiving. The number of turkeys on farms was approximately 2 per cent larger than last year, but smaller than in 1929. The increase was due largely to greater numbers in the Pacific-coast states and in Texas, which off-set decreases in the North Central and Rocky mountain states. Only 43.7 per cent of the crop will be available for the Thanksgiving holiday, now less than a month away, whereas last year 51.5 per cent were ready.

COMING TO THE LAWLER

On the Fox Studio lot during the picturization of "Heartbreak" the picture starring Charles Farrell and Madge Evans which the Lawler Theatre will show to its patrons soon some one of the newspapermen who had come on the set in search of food for the ever hungry presses, asked Farrell what, in his opinion, was the most intense scene he had ever played on the screen.

"Well," he answered, "if I tell you the truth, and it appears in the paper, everybody will shrug it off as a transparent piece of publicity for this picture I'm making now. Nothing is so unpleasant as to tell the truth and get no credit for it but here goes. The most dramatic scene I ever played through in a film is the one I've just finished going over now. And that is the part right near the end where I meet Miss Evans after our long separation caused by the death of her brother which my ignorance has brought about. Let me say, boys and girls, that scene has a grip, and I've been through some tense ones as you know."

"I thought acting was a matter of craftsmanship," said one scribe. "You don't mean to say that you actually feel these things do you, Mr. Farrell?"

"Some actors can act that mechanical way," he replied, but I never could. When I say I can feel that scene yet, I mean it."

Alfred Werker directed this picture in which Hardie Albright, Paul Cavanagh and John Arledge have the added featured roles.

Stunning ensembles and gowns are seen in "Smart Women," an RKO Radio Picture feature at the Lawler Theatre.

Mary Astor, the charming Nancy of the picture, wears a pale chartreuse gown of plain and printed organdy, cut low on the shoulders, with long full skirts, good looking rough tweed suit very tailored and mannish; and a varicolored printed chiffon. An ensemble of silk crepe, with a green satin blouse and hat to match is stunning on Miss Astor. Then, too, there is a black crepe dinner gown.

Noel Francis, who plays the part of Peggy, is lovely in a pale rose light woolen coat with wide lapels and belted waistline, pale rose Wateau hat and rose pumps. It is a new shade of rose, soft and rich. With this she wears a pale blue-green crepe jacket-dress trim and neatly fitted—the only shade of green that would combine so beautifully with the rose. A necklace of coral with beaded bracelet and ornament at waist to match, give charming touches to this ensemble.

Ruth Weston, who is Sally in this comedy-drama, wears several outfits in green tones. One is a printed sport ensemble; another is of wool, with green plaid trim. Her two informal dinner gowns are a black chiffon with design in gold and a two-tone silk crepe fashioned on very feminine lines.

WEDNESDAY — THURSDAY — FRIDAY

November 25-27 is the date set by Manager Lawler of the Lawler Theatre for the opening of "Blonde Crazy," the Warner Bros., production featuring James Cagney and Joan Blondell.

These two snappy young folks were together in their last stage venture, and also in their first screen appearance, "Sinners' Holiday." "Blond Crazy" is the first picture to co-feature them.

As bellhop and linen girl in a big city hotel the merry duo go into the business of humbugging humbuggers, with a speed and enthusiasm, which makes the film one of the most entertaining of the season.

Young Cagney's starward flight has been sure and swift. His work in "The Public Enemy"—which was written by Kubec Glasmon and John Bright, who also wrote "Blonde Crazy"—made him favorably known wherever pictures are shown. His part in the coming film is a marked departure from the gangster type—a wisecracking kid, out to get money from the folks whose business is making quick money.

Joan Blondell is delightfully roughneck in her role as partner to the high-stepping bellhop. Others in the cast are Louis Calhern, Noel Francis, Guy Kibbee, Raymond Milland, Polly Walters, Charles Levinson, William Burress, Peter Erkelenz, Maude Eburne, Walter Percival, Nat Pendleton and over one thousand extras. Roy Del Ruth directed.

WEDNESDAY THROUGH FRIDAY NOVEMBER 18-19-20

RKO Radio Pictures' comedy-drama, "Fanny Foley Herself," starring Edna May Oliver of "Cimarron" fame, through a simple, philosophical story replete with homely drollery, proved to be a most difficult production from a "settings" standpoint.

The authenticity of its Early American and Colonial backgrounds required weeks of research by the art department. His work was doubled because the picture is in color, making accurate data on the hues of those periods as necessary as that on the types of furnishings.

An entire Hollywood theatre was leased for four days. A replica of a millionaire's mansion in the Adirondacks had to be constructed, both interior and exterior.

Airplane cabins, parachutes, forests, gardens and flower beds were synthetically created in sound-proof stages. Hundreds of potted trees and shrubs were leased.

In all, before the adventures of "Fanny" were completely told, 25 different sets had to be built.

The result makes the picture worth while for its backgrounds alone. Splendid performances are given by Miss Oliver and Hobart Bosworth, Florence Roberts, John Darrow, Rochelle Hudson, Helen Chandler, Robert Emmet O'Connor and Harry O. Stubbs.

Richard Dix must enjoy novelty.

The star, who appears in RKO Radio Pictures' "Secret Service" coming to the Lawler Theatre, has established a unique record, even for himself, by playing four distinct characterizations in less than a year.

In "Cimarron" he was a pioneer editor.

In "Young Donovan's Kid" he played the role of a gangster.

In "The Public Defender," he was a social lion who turned amateur detective.

In "Secret Service" he is a Union spy who invades the heart of the Confederate stronghold at Richmond.

"Marcheta" will present him as a bullfighter.

In "Frontier" he will portray the role of a frontier sheriff and gun fighter, a glamorous figure of the early West on the order of his stirring Yancey Cravat of "Cimarron."

DON'T FORGET BIG MID-NITE SHOW
STARTING AT 10.30 ON FRIDAY FOR THE UNEMPLOYED
BIG SCREEN HIT PLUS STAGE SHOW

SATURDAY THROUGH TUESDAY NOVEMBER 14-15-16-17

Long before Ruth Chatterton ever dreamed of following a screen career she turned down a fortune offered her to appear in pictures during her spare time from stage work.

It was in the silent picture days, when Miss Chatterton was soaring to the heights as a young Broadway stage star.

A film corporation, now out of existence, drew up an unusual contract under the terms of which Miss Chatterton would have received thousands of dollars a week for an entire year. It was proposed to follow the star and her plays on tour and maintain picture schedules from nine in the morning till four in the afternoon, with no work on matinee days.

Miss Chatterton was then directing her own stage vehicles and Henry Miller, with whom she was associated, urged her to accept the unprecedented picture offer. The star refused to sign the contract because she was not to be permitted to pick the story material.

The star continued on the stage for several more years before making her screen debut.

This little-known chapter of her career was revealed during a reminiscing bee with Geoffrey Kerr, one of her two leading men in her new picture, "Once a Lady," on the set at the Paramount Hollywood studios. Kerr was in the cast of the star's Broadway success, "The Changelings."

"Once a Lady," which will open an engagement of one week at the Lawler Theatre, Saturday, relates the dramatic experiences of an adventurer who marries into a respectable English family, and is unable to temper her appetite for good times, with the conservative habits of her politically proper mate.

"Kindness," wrote the great poet Goethe, "is the golden chain by which society is bound together."

It is perhaps unnecessary to stress the text to which that golden chain will be subjected in the present national unemployment crisis. Thousands, through no fault of their own, face a winter of need and deprivation. The president of the United States has made a stirring appeal for the establishment and maintenance of public welfare funds in a great emergency.

Among the first to respond has been the National Motion Picture Industries, who through their most prominent national executives have set aside the week of November 18 to 25 in aid of unemployment. Throughout the country, special performances will be held during that week, with the entire proceeds devoted to local community relief funds.

It is of noble significance that the motion picture world, which brings comfort and entertainment to America's millions should be among the first to swell the coffers of the most urgent of charities. The entertainment profession has always been willing, spontaneous and cheerful in its great generosity. Many of its own today stand among the thousands who are in need.

Every citizen should do his utmost to help them in the cause which they are among the first to aid and sponsor.

Plans are now reasonably definite in Greenfield that upon Friday, November the 20th, both the Garden and the Lawler Theatres will have a special evening show starting at 10.30, the entire proceeds of which will be turned over to the Greenfield Unemployment committee. The local committee is bending every effort to assure maximum returns from the occasion, enlisting the services of volunteer committees from nearly every organization in the town to sell the special tickets that will be available within a few days. The program at both these co-operating theatres will be made public the early part of next week.

AT THE AUDITORIUM, BRATTLEBORO FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 20

"The Magnificent Lie," a story of a great love growing out of a strange deception, is Ruth Chatterton's latest starring picture. It was adapted from Leonard Merrick's popular novel, "Laurels and the Lady," and Berthold Viertel directed it for Paramount.

"The Magnificent Lie," will be shown at the Brattleboro Auditorium on Friday, November 20th.

As a girl of doubtful character, hungry for honest love, Ruth Chatterton has a great opportunity to portray an interesting woman character. The girl, a cheap cabaret entertainer, impersonates the romantic ideal of a visionary boy. Her masquerade, starting with a gay wager, becomes tragically realistic.

The dramatic emotion is intensified by occasional flashes of comedy, and Stuart Erwin's interesting character joins these two elements of the story. Bellamy, as the boy, brings a handsome youthfulness and much dramatic talent to his role. The cast includes Sam Hardy, and two French stage stars.

Berthold Viertel, the director, is one of Europe's best-known directors and playwrights.

The setting of "The Magnificent Lie," New Orleans, is important to the development of the story because the swift change of feeling that takes place is typical of the spirit of that southern city. Production experts carefully copied New Orleans' scenes for background atmosphere for the picture.

TEN NORTHFIELDS

sister cities of Northfield. "Northfield Massachusetts, first settled in 1673, was for almost seventy years the outpost of the Puritan colonists of western and northern New England," wrote Postmaster Charles F. Slate, and then he added this interesting information about the name:

"The name of Northfield originated from the two words 'north' and 'field.' When the settlement was made in the section north of Northampton it was called 'a settlement in the north field,' and was later incorporated 'Northfield'."

The why and wherefore of the other Northfields is not so clearly established, whatever the record of Northfield, Massachusetts, and its namesake in Minnesota may be. Northfield, Connecticut, was settled in 1720 by a group of settlers from Hartford, Conn., but where its name came from does not seem to have been recorded by historians. As for Northfield, Vermont, founded in 1784, even the name of its founder, Elijah Paine, offers no clue to this question.

The other Northfields are much younger, reflecting in a general way the western migration of the hardy descendants of the Puritans. Thus in 1807 a Northfield came into being in Summit county, Ohio, founded by one Isaac Bacon, who "had four miles to the nearest neighbor" and whose wife "at one time did not see a white woman for a period of six months." The next Northfield, in chronological order, sprang to life in 1832 when Benjamin Harmon established Northfield, Maine, but here again the names of the good New Englanders offer no clue as to syllables of the town's name. — Elijah Guptill, Washington Smith, Turner Smith or Acton Sweet. Next in order is Minnesota's Northfield, the townsite of which was plotted in 1855 by Judge John W. North, who established a mill here in the days when the Cannon river valley was just beginning the development of its famous milling activity. About the same time, in 1859, to be exact, Northfield township, Jackson county, Wisconsin was started. "Nobody knows where the township got its name," writes H. A. M. Steen, postmaster, "but in 1893 when the post-office was started the village took its name from the township."

No more Northfields came into being until 1890 when Johnathan Cook founded Northfield, Texas. Why Mr. Cook named his settlement Northfield is clear at once from the following statement of J. A. Tipton, postmaster: "Mr. Cook came from Northfield, Minnesota, at the time the James boys tried to rob the Northfield bank." In 1905 Walter Fiefield, E. C. Ryan, Tobias McConnell and John W. Hodges established Northfield, New Jersey, and finally on September 25, 1909, was born the tenth Northfield, this time in Kentucky. Its founder was George S. Gregory. It is a small place close to the Cumberland river, with one church and one school.

Three College Towns

Three of the Northfields are college towns, those in Massachusetts, Vermont and Minnesota. There are two which have a "Northfield News," — Vermont and Minnesota. In the order of founding, the ten Northfields yield statistics and facts of interest as follows:

Northfield, Franklin county, Massachusetts, founded 1673, population 1800; located in the fertile valley of the Connecticut river; its wide main street with its beautiful shade trees is two miles long. It is the home of the D. L. Moody school for religious education and the Moody summer religious conferences.

Northfield, Litchfield county, Connecticut, founded in 1720, population 500.

Northfield, Washington county, Vermont, founded in 1784; population 3,400. Home of Norwich university, the "West Point of New England." Textile mills, lumber mills, granite quarries.

Northfield, Summit county, Ohio, founded in 1807; population, 2,500.

Northfield, Washington county, founded in 1855; population, 4,153. Located in the beautiful cannon river valley, in the heart of a rich dairying section; the Holstein Center of America. Famous as the home of two outstanding colleges, Carleton college and St. Olaf college, and of the St. Olaf Lutheran choir. Northfield for the character of its citizens, who in 1876 repulsed and destroyed the James-Younger band of bank robbers, and thirty-two of whom today are named in "Who's Who in America."

Northfield, Motley county, Texas, founded in 1890; population, 200.

Northfield, Jackson county, Wisconsin, founded in 1893; population, 150.

Northfield, Atlantic county, New Jersey, founded in 1905; population, 2,804.

Northfield, Pulaski county, Kentucky, founded in 1909; population, 150.

BANKERS DEVELOP NEW FINANCE AID

President of American Bankers Association Describes Plan and Services of National Credit Corporation

NEW YORK.—The National Credit Corporation, a billion dollar cooperative institution, is the method worked out by bankers to put into practical effect the central point in President Hoover's plan for renewing the commercial and industrial activity of the nation as proposed in his statement to the nation of October 7, Harry J. Haas, president of the American Bankers Association stated in a recent interview.

The corporation is strictly cooperative in character, he said, to unite the entire banking system and increase the effectiveness of the financial services of banks to their communities in rural districts as well as the cities. The plan will marshal the banking resources of the country, he explained, by creating a national institution whose funds will be loaned when necessary to banks which have assets in their portfolios that are thoroughly sound but are not eligible for loans at federal reserve banks.

To Benefit Everybody

"There is no citizen in the United States but will benefit in very practical ways from the results of the operation of this forward-looking plan of cooperation, which may be regarded as one of the most constructive steps that have been taken toward revival of sound business activity," Mr. Haas declared, adding:

"The National Credit Corporation represents an instrumentality that should have far-reaching effect in restoring the confidence of the public. The plan not only has been formulated by the country's leading banking authorities, but also will be carried out locally as well as nationally by banking representatives who have given their time and thought to this undertaking as a real public service."

"The American Bankers Association convention was in session at the time the plan was proposed and unanimously endorsed it in principle. I have examined the detailed formulation of the working plans as developed by the incessant labors of some of the nation's leading bankers who have undertaken to put it into practical operation in single-minded devotion to the national welfare, and I am able to say without reservation that the National Credit Corporation as set up by them constitutes a practical, sound and efficient means for carrying out President Hoover's proposal."

The old New England community spirit of helpfulness has shown itself in North Bernardston recently. Stanley Marynut, husband and father, was found dead in bed a short time ago. His death was caused by heart trouble.

He had been erecting a new barn on the farm a little north of the state line. The piping to the barn had not been finished so that his widow, her three young daughters and son would have faced the serious problem of bringing water to the stock all winter. Just who organized this neighborhood bee cannot be determined, but ten men came forward the first day and seven the next to render services in order to prepare the little family for winter. Mrs. Marynut was very appreciative of their work.

Among those who aided were Sidney Gaines, George Marko, Joe Lawry, Frank Marynut, Vivian Eugene, Oscar Jaqueth, John Ryan, Emory Pettipiece, Guy Fairbanks, Nicholas Nebelieski.

Will Powers Institute have the Town Hall to play basketball in this year? This question is directly up to the townspeople and the selectmen.

It has been decided that there will be no sports this coming year if Powers does not get the hall. If the boys have nothing to do in the Athletic line what are they going to turn to? Dances, Movies and other sorts of amusements will be attended. Without a doubt most parents want their children enjoying a clean sort of amusement rather than a dance that is morally indecent.

In most people's minds it is not so hard on the hall to have basketball as it is to have dances. In basketball there are only eleven men on the floor while at a dance there are about fifty couples dancing at the same time.

Last winter the boy scouts had the hall all the year. The janitor has stated that they broke up some furniture and that basketball players had never done that while playing there.

Some people argue that it will hurt the plaster on the wall. This can be eliminated as it is in all other town halls by having the outside line three feet from the wall.

Powers has the best material for a basketball team that she has had for years. So let's pray and hope we can have the hall.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS—I

Kahlil Gibran gives the report of Georgus of Beirut of savings of Jesus whom he had invited to his house. Jesus spoke of the life which all men share in common, and said among other things, "The beauty of the day is not only in what you see, but in what other men see." Jesus is further reported as exhorting, be "the giver who gives in gratitude, and the receiver who receives in pride and recognition."

We should not wilfully live in sadness. It is something we have no right to share with others. We should cultivate a happy mood. This is itself a sharing attitude. It is a rose in bloom. The world sees and smells it. It would be a sin to put it in a dark cellar, or otherwise shut it up and away. Our life is meant to be shared, and only that mood which is good in touch with others should we bear in soul and body.

Henry van Dyke has defined "talkability" as "a reciprocal human quality; active as well as passive; a power of bestowing and receiving." We are social in being mutual. We look into our friend's heart as into a mirror and see reflected our tastes and pleasures. There is much of soliloquy in a friendly conversation. One talks to himself in the person of his companion. Each has something in common with the other and brings treasures out of old chests, forgotten until reminded of them in the air that is electric with pleasures. The power to excite, as to receive, is conditioned wholly upon the power to give.

When Goethe assigned Byron the first place among English poets, he had just got Byron's manuscript of the dedication to his "Sardanapalus," and was reminded that he had then collected in his own house everything that related to his connection with the English poet. When his mind was just then full of Byron, he said "The English may think of Byron as they please; but this is certain, that they can show no poet who is to be compared to him. He is different from all the others, and, for the most part, greater."

Sitting upon Benton Lawn one evening, I noticed an automobile pass with leisurely grace. There was a party of three in it. They were enjoying together the sweet open air of the evening in the late spring. They made a circuit of streets evidently and reassessed as before. Still later the same car apparently went by with one man in it, the driver, who was speeding. He had no pleasure in himself. He wanted to get somewhere he was not at the time. The street was a desert, and he was solitary. He had no immediate connection with his kind. Each one in a car apart from him was hastening as he. Perhaps a great part of our restlessness comes of our isolation. We are not content in company even when we are not of it; we want to be away from it; we want to be with our own. Rapid transit often gets an isolated man or woman away from oneself. (In Springfield, Mass.) Charles Chambers Conner

The Widow's Lament: "Don't talk to me about lawyers, my dear. I've had so much trouble over the property that I sometimes wish my husband hadn't died!"
